2026 Lake Michigan Lighthouse Map and Circle Tour Now Available

The West Michigan Tourist Association (WMTA) has released the 2026 Lake Michigan Lighthouse Map & Circle Tour.

Available in both print and digital formats, the free map highlights the official Lake Michigan Circle Tour route and showcases more than 100 lighthouses and must-see attractions throughout Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, and Indiana. Travelers can view or request a free copy online through WMTA.org. Copies are also available at Michigan Welcome Centers and many WMTA partner locations across the state.

Vacationers have been circling Lake Michigan for generations, but the official Lake Michigan Circle Tour route was established in the 1980s through a partnership between the Michigan Department of Transportation and WMTA. The Lake Michigan Circle Tour became the first officially signed Great Lakes Circle Tour and remains the only Circle Tour entirely within the United States.

Today, the Circle Tour remains one of the Midwest's most iconic road trips, featuring miles of shoreline, waterfront communities, historic landmarks, and one of the region's greatest engineering marvels — the Mackinac Bridge.

"The Lake Michigan Circle Tour continues to inspire travelers to slow down and experience the beauty, history, and hospitality found along Lake Michigan," said WMTA Executive Director, Dave Lorenz.

The 2026 cover features the stunning Ludington North Breakwater Lighthouse, photographed by Lillian Dotzlaf as part of the 2025 WMTA Annual Photo Contest.

Study examining feasibility of year-round local produce marketplace in Berrien County

A new study is exploring whether the Benton Harbor Fruit Market could become home to a year-round local produce marketplace aimed at supporting Southwest Michigan farmers while helping residents have better access to fresh produce.

Health in Harmony.
125 years ago, Bronson began with a promise. What started as one hospital has grown into a symphony of care - each milestone adding a new note, each team strengthening the harmony. Across southwest Michigan, our hospitals, providers and teams move in step, guided by one mission: the health of our communities.
This anniversary is more than a celebration; it's a reaffirmation. Through innovation, investment and an unwavering commitment to safety, we continue to strengthen every hospital and community we serve because world-class care should always be in harmony, and never far from home.

The Summer We've Been Waiting For!

The wait is finally over! Summer feels like it has arrived. This past weekend served as the perfect launching pad for what promises to be a very memorable season. From the nostalgic reopening of our historic lighthouse to the proud cadence of our annual Memorial Day parade, downtown was bustling with summer energy. It proved once again that our local spirit shines brightest when we gather to honor our past and look eagerly toward our future.

The festivities kicked off early Saturday morning with the return of our weekly Farmers' Market and Lighthouse tours. Lake Bluff Park transformed into a hub of activity as local farmers, bakers, and artisans filled the bluff with all kinds of goodies. Many vendors sold out early, as the bluff was filled with folks eager to enjoy the gorgeous holiday weekend sun. Just across the river, folks scaled the steps of our iconic lighthouse, taking in the panoramic views of the St. Joseph skyline and appreciating the heritage that anchors our community. Both the market and the lighthouse tours will continue to welcome visitors every single Saturday throughout the summer,

The heart of the weekend, however, was our annual Memorial Day parade. This year's procession carried profound historical weight as we combined our deep gratitude for our local veterans with national anticipation for America's upcoming Semiquincentennial—our country's 250th birthday. The streets were lined with residents and visitors waving flags, cheering on marching bands, and standing in quiet reverence as our local veterans moved past. It was a great display of patriotism, honoring the brave men and women who selflessly served to protect the freedoms we enjoy today.

We also unveiled this year's stairway mural. Sponsored by Lest We Forget, the mural specifically honors America's 250th birthday. Capturing themes of belonging, unity, and freedom, the mural turns our bluff stairway into a canvas of reflection. It stands as a tribute to our nation's historic milestone, reminding everyone who passes by of the deep roots and shared values that bind us together as a community.

While last weekend provided a great gateway to the season, the summer is just getting started! Looking ahead, on Saturday, May 30th, our regular weekly Farmers' Market will expand into a sprawling celebration of creativity with the arrival of our annual Summer Artisan Fair. The fair will feature an array of regional painters, sculptors, jewelers, and crafters showcasing their unique, handmade creations alongside our usual market vendors. It is the premier opportunity to support local talent, find one-of-a-kind treasures, and enjoy a vibrant Saturday in the open air.

The momentum carries right into the following week. Save the date for Sunday, June 7th, when we host "Antiques on the Bluff." Our second antiques show of the year will transform Lake Bluff Park into a treasure hunter's paradise, attracting sixty top-tier dealers and collectors from across the region. Whether you are a seasoned antique hunter searching for vintage finds, a history buff looking for collectibles, or simply a casual browser enjoying a Sunday stroll with a gorgeous view, Antiques on the Bluff promises a wonderful day.

The sheer volume of participation in last weekend's events demonstrates a desire to reconnect, celebrate, and support the community we call home. Our local businesses, volunteer organizers, and historical societies have poured countless hours into making this season spectacular, and their efforts are already paying off beautifully. As we step into the warm days of June, let's maintain the momentum. Join us at the markets, explore the artisan booths, hunt for antiques, and take a moment to appreciate the new America 250 mural. This summer is ours to enjoy, and based on our opening weekend, it is going to be a season to remember.

See you downtown!

Dave Says
The Executor Has One Job

Dear Dave,

My wife and her siblings each inherited about $10,000 when their dad passed away. One of her siblings, who was named executor of the estate, told my wife that she plans to withhold the money from one of their siblings. She said it's because she thinks she's financially irresponsible. My wife and I don't think this is the right thing to do, and we're wondering if it's even legal. Can you give us some answers?

Mike

Dear Mike,

You and your wife are correct. What her sibling is planning isn't right. On top of that, this person also doesn't have the legal authority to withhold the money.

The reason a person is called the "executor" in these situations is because it's their sole job to execute the directives of the deceased person that are contained in the will. The executor isn't a trust officer who gets to decide what's best. An executor is there to make sure the directions in the will are followed. Period. It doesn't matter what the executor thinks about the deceased's wishes or if they agree with them.

When you pick the executor of your will, you should always make sure that person has the honesty and integrity to execute your will. Any executor who tries pulling something like this is liable to be sued by the person from whom they withheld an inheritance. And guess what? The person suing them would win, because the executor will have violated their fiduciary responsibility.

Mike, if you and your wife haven't already spoken with the sibling who's the executor, you need to do it now—before this thing gets too far out of hand. Sooner or later, someone in the family's going to let it slip that one sibling did another one dirty where the will is concerned. Families talk. You know that, and I know that. It will happen.

And right now, this particular sibling-executor is about to create a whole lot of trouble for themselves if they follow through with this dumb idea.

— Dave

The Promise and Pitfalls of Home Warranty Companies

Home warranty companies have grown popular in the real estate market by offering homeowners protection against costly repairs to major systems and appliances. These plans typically cover heating and air conditioning, plumbing, electrical systems, refrigerators, ovens, and laundry machines. For a monthly or annual fee, policyholders can request service when an item fails. The company then arranges a technician and pays for repairs or replacement after the homeowner meets the deductible. Many view these warranties as useful safeguards, particularly for aging homes or new buyers concerned about sudden expenses.

However, the actual experience often falls short of the advertised simplicity. While providers promise quick help, homeowners frequently encounter significant hurdles before coverage is approved. Claims demand detailed documentation, proof of regular maintenance, and confirmation that the problem is not due to wear and tear or a pre-existing condition. Issues that seem straightforward can be denied if they fall into excluded categories, forcing homeowners to pay out of pocket. These strict requirements can make the protection feel limited despite the premiums paid.

The claims process itself frequently causes frustration. Homeowners must contact the provider, submit descriptions of the problem, and often wait days or weeks for approval or inspection. During this time, families may cope with broken air conditioning during hot weather or leaking pipes. Annual payout caps and limits on replacement values further reduce the benefit, sometimes resulting in costs that approach or exceed the warranty price.

A major challenge lies with the contractor network. Many independent repair professionals choose not to work with home warranty companies. They often cite slow payment processing, lower reimbursement rates than direct customer jobs, and heavy paperwork as reasons for declining participation. Warranty providers rely on their approved technician lists, but availability can be inconsistent. When trusted local contractors opt out, homeowners may wait longer or face the choice of using unfamiliar providers or paying full price for prompt service from a preferred expert. This contractor reluctance creates delays that reduce the warranties' intended convenience.

Despite these issues, home warranties remain appealing to those seeking budget predictability for home maintenance. The industry continues expanding as housing costs rise and buyers search for risk management tools. Stronger providers focus on clearer terms and improved service to boost customer satisfaction.

For buyers, careful evaluation is essential. Reading full contract details for exclusions, understanding deductibles, and reviewing coverage limits before purchase helps avoid disappointment. Comparing several plans and researching recent customer feedback can reveal more dependable options.

In the end, home warranties represent one option for shielding a major investment. They can deliver savings on significant repairs but require realistic expectations and patience. Homeowners who understand both the benefits and limitations are better positioned to use these policies successfully. As the market develops, providers may refine their processes to better meet customer needs.

The United Way of Southwest Michigan is conducting the study through its Be Healthy Berrien initiative and in partnership with the Southwest Michigan Planning Commission. Be Healthy Berrien Director, Dawn Marie Smith, tells us this is merely a feasibility study.

"The study is assessing how we can build or potentially build -- this is just a study, so nothing is being built -- a more connected, farmer-centered model that creates linkages between farmers and the infrastructure within the food system," Smith said.

Smith says the study is being done at a time when many Southwest Michigan farmers face uncertainty finding reliable buyers for their crops and while many residents continue to struggle with access.

So, are they looking at starting some kind of farmers market at the Benton Harbor Fruit Market?

"We don't foresee it being a complete remodel. It's more of what's the best concept for this space and what are the components and how do we potentially look at that for the future to build that out."

The new study, being done with consulting firm New Venture Advisors, came of a listening session co-hosted by the Michigan Department of Agriculture and Rural Development back in March. Smith says the study will look at several considerations, including food hub operations, infrastructure needs, workforce, food partnerships, and financial sustainability.

Results are expected in the first quarter of 2027. When all is done, Smith says the surrounding community will have to determine if the year-round local produce marketplace is a project it wants to pursue.

Planning already underway for next year's Michigan Black Summit in Benton Harbor

Organizers of the Michigan Black Summit are already at work planning the 2027 edition of the event, just a few months after hosting 200 people at Lake Michigan College for 2026.

Summit Chair Trenton Bowens tells us the event in February was a resounding success with leaders from all over the state coming to Benton Harbor for discussions about how they can improve their communities. And while summit organizers in the past have floated the idea of taking the event on the road in future years, Bowens says they've decided that Benton Harbor can be the only place for it.

"We thought about it long and hard, and this is home," Bowens said. "It was built in Benton Harbor, it started out in Benton Harbor, and we're going to keep it in Benton Harbor."

Bowens says when the summit returns to the Mendel Center next year, the theme will be "What's Going On," paying tribute to the 1970s. He says holding the event in Benton Harbor shows the area is getting attention statewide.

"We have a lot to offer. We have an airport. We are close to the highway, Detroit or Chicago, and we have water. So at the same time, it may be snowy, but we're able to promote Benton Harbor as the area for opportunity."

The 2027 summit will include conversations around Black education, Black healthcare, Black economic development, leadership, voting rights, housing, and the future of Black communities throughout Michigan.

"There's actually a lobby day getting ready to happen in Lansing, and they'll be using the pillars of the Black Summit. So, every time somebody leaves the summit, my hope is that they -- I don't like going to these conferences where you're just sitting there -- but my hope is that people are able to learn and go back to their communities and be agents of change."

Bowens says housing and healthcare costs will be a particular focus, and he wants those who attend to leave with a clear blueprint of how to bring progress to their areas. He's expecting attendance to rise to more than 300 next year.

Three faith communities in Southwest Michigan coming together for film screening next month

Three Southwest Michigan faith communities are coming together to host a free screening of an award-winning film next month in South Haven.

The First Hebrew Congregation of South Haven, Lily of the Valley Church in Covert, and Temple B'nai Shalom in St. Joseph are teaming up for a showing of Old Heart on June 22 at Lake Michigan College in South Haven. Old Heart tells the little-known story of American Black soldiers who fought in the occupied Netherlands during World War II, helping to save Jews, resistance fighters, and Dutch citizens.

Organizers say the screening comes amid efforts to restore historical panels recently removed from a U.S. military cemetery in the Netherlands that commemorated the efforts of those solders. Everyone's invited to attend the screening and hear from the filmmakers about the picture's modern-day significance.

Reservations to the screenings can be made by emailing shapirolerner@gmail.com, and at rogerrapoport.com/oldheartmovie

Berrien Springs "Drawn To Play" Playground

Some exciting news was shared earlier this week from the Village of Berrien Springs regarding a bold new community-driven effort underway. Residents, businesses, and local leaders are uniting to transform children's dreams into a lasting investment in the future of the community.

The "Race to the Ribbon Cutting" campaign has officially launched to support the Drawn to Play Playground project at Grove Park — a one-of-a-kind public space inspired directly by the voices and imaginations of local children.

Through Michigan's Public Spaces Community Places initiative and a partnership with Patronicity, the project now has the opportunity to unlock a transformational $75,000 matching grant. If the community successfully raises $75,000 through local donations, every contribution will be matched dollar for dollar, doubling the impact and accelerating the creation of a vibrant gathering space and playground for families across the region.

The project began with a simple question posed to local children: "What would your dream playground look like?" Their drawings, imaginations, and creativity then became the foundation for the project taking shape in Berrien Springs. What started as a classroom activity quickly evolved into a powerful movement centered around community pride, placemaking, and the belief that even the youngest voices can shape the future of a community.

The campaign is being framed as a "Race to the Ribbon Cutting" leading up to the June 26 opening celebration at Grove Park. Community members are encouraged to participate in the "Find $10. Give $10." challenge, which will emphasize how small acts of support can create transformational impact.

Community leaders say the project represents more than a playground — it is an investment in quality of life, families, and vibrant public spaces that strengthen community connections and support economic vitality.

"This project represents the very best of community driven placemaking," said Sheila Snyder, President of the Village of Berrien Springs. "Drawn to Play shows what is possible when a community listens to its children, embraces creativity, and comes together around a shared vision. This playground will serve families for generations and stands as a lasting reflection of collaboration, imagination, and community pride."

"This project is helping create the kind of welcoming public spaces that strengthen community pride, support families, and enhance quality of life in Berrien Springs," said Jennifer Leich, Director of the Central Berrien Chamber Growth Alliance. "It is exciting to see a project inspired by local children become a lasting investment in the future of our community."

The project has already gained statewide recognition through a recent Michigan Municipal League Community Excellence feature highlighting Drawn to Play as an inspiring example of innovative and community-centered placemaking. The feature can be found online here:
tinyurl.com/BerrienSpringsDreamPlayground.

As momentum continues to build, organizers are calling on residents, businesses, alumni and supporters throughout the region to help bring the vision to life ahead of the June 26 ribbon-cutting celebration.

Community members interested in supporting the project or learning more can visit the official Drawn to Play Patronicity campaign page online:

Why the Poet Swooned over June

So, are you looking forward to a glorious June? Do you love when the youngsters cry "School's out!"? And their parents simply cry? Will you revel in June's really long days? Have you been waiting for your loyal dopey columnist to appear all cultured by tossing off that famous bit of poesy that goesy like soesy: "What is so rare as a day in June?"

You know, doesn't hearing that famous phrase make you feel like learning lots more about it? Well, tough, I've got a deadline and this is my only column idea.

• "What is so rare as a day in June" is only one line of several hundred in a looooong poem called "The Vision of Sir Launfal." It's about some knights searching for the Holy Grail, featuring characters like King Arthur, his father Uther, his little-known sister Marthar, and their arch-enemy, Lex Luthor.

• For those of you who think my weekly columns could never be compared to epic poetry, consider this: If you analyze "Vision" and the entire collection of columns I've ever written, you'll never find a single word in either that rhymes with "Launfal."

• A town that's just like home to me has something in common with the author of "What is so rare as blah, blah, blah." The poet who wrote it was named James Russell Lowell, and the Indiana town I grew up in was named James Russell Lowell. Actually, it's just Lowell. Although every couple years there's a voter referendum about renaming it "Launfal."

• Did you know that certain Lowell scholars – that is, scholars who study Lowell the poet, not scholars from Lowell the town (although there's probably a scholar in Lowell the town who specializes in Lowell the poet, making him or her a Lowell Lowell scholar) – wouldn't bother to read this run-on sentence?

• It was probably someone who WOULD read that sentence who wrote this in a bio of Lowell (the poet): "'The Vision of Sir Launfal' is a non-Arthurian Arthurian poem." Riiiight.

• Lowell (the poet) belonged to a group of authors known as both "The Fireside Poets" and "The Schoolroom Poets." Other members included Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, John Greenleaf Whittier, and Oliver Wendell Holmes. A poet named Dale Poznicky was a member briefly, but left when he got fed up with being taunted for not having three names.

• Lowell (the poet) secretly felt superior to the other Fireroom Poets for not merely having three names, but three FIRST names.

• Lowell (by now you know I'm talking about the poet, right?) started a literary magazine in 1843 but it folded after only two issues because his readers DIDN'T E-MAIL HIM ANY STORY IDEAS. I think it would've lasted longer if he'd done what I plan to do over the next month: Write a four-column series of rhyming pieces that link together into an Arthurian non-Arthurian poem.

Wait a minute! Maybe an epic poem is just what my writing career needs! If it's successful, I might even get invited to join the Fireworks Poets! And people would start referring to me by MY three names – all FIRST names to boot: Donald Launfal Stuart.

Do you have what it takes?

Do you have what it takes? This can be an energizing question, but also a debilitating one.

Coaches ask this question anticipating that the team will answer with an emphatic "Yes!" Recruiters into the armed forces ask it to get people to ponder the idea that they, too, can serve their country.

This question can cause doubt as well. "I don't know, do I have what it takes?" "Am I qualified to do this task?"

All Christians are called to serve God by living a moral life under God's standard as a conduit to distribute God's love. Christians are also called to share the message of God's grace — that Jesus lived, died, and rose for all people. This is your task. Do you have what it takes?

Even after Jesus physically appeared to his disciples a variety of times after his resurrection from the dead, some doubted. "When [the disciples] saw [Jesus], they worshiped him; but some doubted." (Matthew 28:17). Some worshiped Jesus, but some doubted.

It is natural to doubt yourself in the face of God's extremely high standard of behavior and sharing his good news. Doubt does not disqualify you from his service. Self-doubt may even enhance your ability to serve, because you realize that your life doesn't depend on your behavior alone.

It is a sad and debilitating way to live if you think that your life depends entirely on your behavior. It can leave you up at night with nagging thoughts of self-doubt, second-guessing your abilities and decisions.

Jesus' words for his disciples then are his words for you now.

Then Jesus came to them and said, "All authority in heaven and on earth has been given to me. Therefore go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, and teaching them to obey everything I have commanded you. And surely I am with you always, to the very end of the age." (Matthew 28:18–20)

Jesus begins and ends the scope of work with his power, authority, ability, and presence. You are qualified not because of you, but because of him. You have what it takes because Jesus gives himself for you. You have the words to speak because of the words of forgiveness and grace you have heard. You can live for him because the Holy Spirit lives in you because of your baptism. You have what it takes.

What if you changed your daily routine by starting with a prayer of reliance on God's strength, rather than going through the list of everything else that needs to be done?

Prayer: Jesus, you have all the power and authority, yet you ask me to participate in your mission. Give me words to say and help me live in service to others so they can experience your love. Amen.
